

Natural Treatment of Erection which Stimulates the Libido

Problems with erections and libido, pelvic discomfort and pain, problems with urination, impotence, frequent urination, nocturia, (an urge to urinate again soon after urinating), are the signs of the prostate problems which are stressful condition for men. Can they be treated?

Innovative Dr Allen's Device for Prostate Care relaxes tension in prostate tissue naturally, without resorting to medication, improves erection and naturally helps to treat the cause of the Prostatitis, Chronic pelvic pain syndrome and Benign Prostatic Hypertrophy (BPH). The unique method helps to protect against harmful medications, possible operations, and impotence and increases libido.

What do we know about the problems with erection and causes of Prostatitis Chronic pelvic pain syndrome and Benign Prostatic Hypertrophy?

Prostate problem accompanies with shocking symptoms such as burning ejaculation, having burning pee or testicular pain which usually lead to weak erections, also frequent urination, nocturia, weak urination stream accompanies BPH. Psychological factors which obviously exist in patients with chronic prostatitis and it may affect their erectile function. The relationship between male infertility and chronic pelvic pain syndrome (CPPS) and chronic prostatitis will also be explored.

Prostate health represents a problem of a national importance. Chronic pelvic pain syndrome/chronic prostatitis is a common condition in men, accounting for a significant number of visits to primary care physicians and urologists. The UK National Surveys on chronic prostatitis demonstrate that up to 50% of men experience prostatitis during their lifetimes. Statistically, 50% of all men in the UK have Benign Prostatic Hyperplasia (BPH) identifiable histologically at the age of 60, and by 85 years the prevalence is about 90%. At present, most doctors recommend the removal of the enlarged part of the prostate as the best long-term solution for patients with BPH. There are 40,000 surgical interventions per year in the UK. The adverse effects of the BHP treatment include impotence, incontinence and the need for re-treatment, see below.

The complementary and alternative medicine has some efforts toward improving the prostate health. The measures to improve Prostate well-being through food and supplements by including whole grain breads, fruits, vegetables and various nuts; vitamins or minerals, and advice to drink plenty of water each day are doubtful because prostate gland is far away from gastrointestinal tract and its impact to the gland functioning is uncertain.

Telling stories that even a daily 15-minute walk get men's bodies moving and encourage blood circulation that can have an impact on the health of their prostates are absolutely ungrounded.

Herbal remedies and a restricted diet help to protect prostate from some initial triggers which are responsible in development of the prostate problems. Special made herb cocktails by stimulating urination help to flush out urine from the bladder. Also herbs which provide antibacterial effect help to get rid of infection in urinary tract and others may produce a sedative result helping to reduce pain but herbs do not cure the prostate problem itself.

The hopelessness of herbal treatment is the reason why people who suffer from prostate problems are compelled to look for medications and surgical solutions. Therefore, treatment with herbs do not compare with Dr Allen's Device for Prostate Care which is the only way to treat prostatitis, chronic pelvic pain syndrome and Benign Prostatic Hypertrophy, BPH naturally.

As can be seen the complementary and alternative medicine, are helpful only in treatment of the symptoms of kidney stones, not of the cause of the kidney problem, wherein Dr Allen's Device for Prostate Care* is directed to remove burning ejaculation, burning pee, testicular pain, pelvic pain, weak urination steam, erectile dysfunction an so promotes libido naturally by targeting the cause of the prostate disorder.

The cause of Chronic Prostatitis/ Chronic pelvic pain syndrome and BPH (the growth of prostate tissue) was unknown until Dr Allen created The Theory of the Origin of Health Disorders, which explains that:

- Inflammation or irritation of the prostate from factors such as stagnation of its own secretion, are initial triggers in developing Prostatitis and BPH. Tissue swelling in some parts of the gland disturbs the supply of nutrients to the prostate.
- In order to compensate for the lack of nutrition, the surrounding tissue reacts by increasing its volume by developing new capillaries, thus putting the tissue of the gland under further pressure.
- This in turn lowers the temperature in the compressed area of the tissue which worsens the situation because it leads to the expansion of extra capillaries, and additional pressure.
- The prostate is not contained by a strong membrane that can prevent its growth; therefore, when pressure builds up inside the affected area the tissue starts to grow. This leads to the development of Benign Prostatic Hypertrophy.

In the case of Chronic Prostatitis, increased pressure from the initial inflammation creates swelling of the tissue that surrounds it. The resulting lowering of the temperature in the compressed area worsens the symptoms of this disorder, i.e. pain and frequent urination. It has been shown that the lowering of the temperature becomes a trigger itself in the expansion of capillaries that consequently increases puffing up of tissue and enlargement.

In order to stop the swelling and thus remove the pressure in the prostate, it is essential to calm the capillaries and prevent their growth by normalising the temperature in the damaged area. This will improve the metabolism of the gland freeing the surrounding tissue of pressure. This is the only harmless way to treat prostate problems.

Compare this with the current official approach to prostate problems treatment

Nowadays, most cases of Chronic Prostatitis, Chronic pelvic pain syndrome are treated (not very successfully) with different medications, whilst the symptoms of BPH are often treated surgically by removing a part or all of the enlarged prostate gland. Neither of these approaches, however, tackles causes of the disorders; and both of them have negative side effects:

1. The medications can frequently depress the metabolic processes, which are essential for the normal functioning of the body. As a result, men can feel weakness and fatigue, and also there is an increased risk of gastrointestinal complications ranging from stomach pain to severe constipation.

2. The most common operation is the Transurethral resection of the prostate (TURP), i.e. a partial removal of the enlarged prostate; also an open Prostatectomy is still not rare. Each surgical intervention is dangerous because of possible infection. In addition, urinary incontinence is a devastating complication that can occur. Another possible complication is that the nerves that control the penis can become damaged. If it happens, impotence can develop.

What is being offered here?

Dr Allen's Device for Prostate Care offers an absolutely new approach to the treatment of causes of the prostate problems. It helps to treat Chronic Prostatitis, Chronic pelvic pain syndrome, Benign Prostatic Hypertrophy and Prostate Calculi. - Provides a long-term treatment for the cause of pain, eases urination prevents stressful partners misunderstandings and impotence;
- Promotes libido, a healthy functioning of prostate and improves erection.

"Every man will sooner or later benefit from this new method of preventing and treating prostate problems," highlights Dr Allen. "It is an absolutely natural way to tackle prostate disorders by targeting their actual causes, without creating any adverse side-effects.”

Dr Allen explains that the whole stressed area puffs up, putting the prostate under a massive pressure from the swelling of the tissue.

“In order to stop the tissue from expanding and thus to help the organ to recover, it is essential to calm the capillaries. Consequently, the swelling disappears relaxing the organ. The symptoms, such as burning ejaculation, burning pee, testicular pain disappeared naturally.”

The natural thermo-elements are a major component of Dr Allen’s therapeutic devices. By making the prostate temperature constant, Dr Allen’s Device for Prostate Care creates an ideal environment for the capillaries to stabilise the body temperature in its tissue and supply it with all necessary nutrients, thereby helping the organ to recover. The device helps to improve the erectile dysfunction ejaculation and weak urination stream, and relieves pain in testicles and pelvic area, and so increases libido. Existing negative psychological factors which affect the erectile function disappeared and it sets up the positive processes of recovering from infertility and future impotence.

“The Prostate Care Device is up to 100% effective, cure the prostatitis, chronic pelvic pain syndrome and benign prostatic hypertrophy, BPH, stimulates erection, increases libido because it tackles the cause of the problem” – Dr Simon Allen add.
